

Australia is among the countries with the world's highest incidence of malignant mesothelioma. This is a direct consequence of the intense use of asbestos and its products in the previous century.

The Asbestos Diseases Research Institute, established by the Asbestos Diseases Research Foundation, is a state of the art research facility tackling the asbestos legacy. Scientists at the Asbestos Diseases Research Institute conduct research focused on preclinical, clinical and epidemiological aspects of asbestos-related diseases. New insight will be translated into more effective ways of prevention, better diagnostic and therapeutic procedures and novel treatment approaches.

We depend upon financial support from the Australian community. Every single gift makes an important contribution to our research into asbestos-related diseases.
